

INDEX OF PLACES IN ENGLAND AND WALES

These pages are only intended to be used in conjunction with the list of Registration Districts in England and Wales 1837-1974 (www.ukbmd.org.uk/genuki/reg) For each place listed, this index shows the county and registration district in which it was were situated between 1.7.1837 and 31.3.1974, at which latter date the districts were considerably altered.

Please note that this is not intended to be a comprehensive gazetteer of place-names, and that only local government areas named in the General Register Office's published lists are included.

The columns shown are:

- Civil Parish — The smallest unit of local government, defined by Parliament between 1858 and 1866 as a place in which a poor late was separately levied. Civil parishes superseded an earlier patchwork system of ecclesiastical parishes, chapelries, townships, hamlets, tythings, and extra-parochial places. As the boundaries of these earlier units were generally identical to the civil parishes that succeeded them, no distinction is made between them during the period 1837 to 1866 for the purpose of this listing. From the 1880s onwards civil parishes were altered, created, and abolished with disconcerting frequency, and those changes involving the transferral of small parts of parishes between registration districts are described on the main website, rather than in this index. Civil parishes were abolished in Greater London when that county was created on 1.4.1965, and so the names of its constituent London Boroughs are given instead. Where the spelling of a civil parish has varied over time, the most recent official version is used.
- County — From 1837 to 1889 the name of the ancient county is shown (including any associated counties corporate), and from 1889 to 1974 the name of the administrative county (including associated county boroughs). Until the end of the nineteenth century some civil parishes were divided between two or more counties.
- From and To — The range of years in which a civil parish formed part of a registration district. See the main website for more precise dates.
- Registration District — The official name of the registration district. Where the spelling of a district name has varied over time, and no official renaming order has been identified, the most recent recorded version is used.
- Comments — For those Civil Parishes which appeared or disappeared during the coverage period, the names of their preceding or successor parishes are indicated (normally in descending order of population).

Place names are listed strictly in alphabetical order of pronunciation, so that Little Budworth is shown under “L” (rather than “Budworth, Little”), and All Hallows Barking under “A”. Pressing CTRL+F together (or the “binoculars” button on the toolbar) will facilitate searching for a particular place name.

Due to the fragmentary nature of the sources consulted, some assumptions have had to be made concerning the dates of certain boundary changes, particularly those after 1940. Consequently the information is intended only as a general guide for researchers: the compiler can accept no liability for any errors or omissions, and reserves the right to update this list from time to time as new information becomes available. In the near future I hope to extend the coverage beyond the reorganisation of the districts in April 1974.

This list is unique, and it has taken me fifteen years to put together from a wide variety of sources, each of which has had to be painstakingly checked and cross-referenced. So while you may save this file to your own computer for the purposes of your own research, it must not be republished in print or in electronic form without my permission. Certain features of this Adobe Acrobat file have been disabled in order to prevent copying and printing, but this should not prevent the reader from using the listing for the purpose for which it was intended – namely, to identify the registration districts in which particular places were situated at any given period between 1837 and 1974. The companion web-site at www.ukbmd.org.uk/genuki/reg can be used to find out which places were situated in a particular registration district, and which local offices currently hold the records for that district.
